

Federal aid available to tornado victims

WHAT TO EXPECT FROM FEMA:

- Inspector's Call: After you register - either online at www.DisasterAssistance.gov or by calling 1-800-621-3362 - a nine-digit application number is assigned. An inspector will call to schedule an appointment to visit your damaged property, generally no longer than 10 days after registration.
- Inspector's Visit: Keep the scheduled appointment to make sure the assistance process moves quickly. Inspectors will review both structural and personal property damage and file a report, but they do not determine eligibility or estimate or determine the value of damage or losses. The inspection typically takes 15 to 45 minutes.

Grant County has been declared a disaster area and is eligible for federal assistance after the March 2 tornado ripped through Crittenden.

Gov. Steve Beshear received notification March 9 that President Barack Obama has authorized assistance for residents of nine more Kentucky counties, including Grant, that suffered significant damage as a result of tornadoes and severe storms.

The declaration brings the total number of counties receiving federal aid from FEMA to 16.

“It’s very important because it allows people to get assistance for living expenses, especially renters,” said Rick Willoby, director of Grant County Emergency Management. “It also allows home owners to get low interest loans to rebuild.

housing and home repairs, low-cost loans to cover uninsured property losses, and other programs to help individuals and business owners recover from the effects of the disaster.

The deadly storms and tornadoes across Kentucky caused 23 deaths and more than 300 injuries.

Willoby said he was always confident that Grant County would be approved for federal assistance based on the amount of damage received in the Crittenden area, especially the Harvesters Subdivision.

POLICE

Marathon robbed, public help needed to ID thieves

By Jamie Baker-Nantz

Police are hoping the public can help them solve a break in at the Marathon Station on Ky. 36 in Williamstown.

They may be related to three other break ins that occurred recently at Peg’s Pit Stop in Corinth and the Jonesville Country Store.

According to police, at least two, possibly three suspects, broke out a side window around 12:30 a.m. on Feb. 26.

The suspects ransacked the office and attempted to destroy a security camera. Eventually they gained access to the ATM and stole an undisclosed amount of cash.

Sgt. Robert Reed of the Williamstown Police Department is in charge of the investigation.

While the suspects attempted to destroy the video camera, Reed said he was able to save some of the footage.

“The video showed all kinds of traffic going by but you wouldn’t necessarily notice because of how they made entry,” Reed said.

Reed said it’s possible they also used a lookout and scanner or walkie talkies to communicate.

“We believe the suspects are local and that they were also responsible for the other break ins because of similarities between them,” Reed said.

Marijuana charges dismissed against GCMS teacher

A Harrison County grand jury did not indict Dr. Nicholas Catey on charges of cultivating marijuana.

Catey, a special education teacher at Grant County Middle School for 15 years, was charged on Jan. 20 when Kentucky State Police executed a warrant for him at his Berry home.

Police said they found marijuana plants growing in pots on his farm.

Catey was placed on unpaid leave on Jan. 26 pending the outcome of the case.

Grant County Superintendent Ron Livingood said Catey will be working out of the central office for the remainder of the school year. He is updating student records.

Story/photos by Jamie Baker-Nantz

Crittenden Baptist Church is buzzing with activity. Since the March 2 tornado, it has become one busy place as the central drop off point for donations, volunteers, victims to connect with emergency service providers and its kitchen has been serving three meals a day to victims and volunteers.

It got started when Kim Haubner, the founder of HOPE (Helping People Out Everywhere) posted on Facebook that her newly founded organization would be distributing clothes and food to tornado victims on March 4.

The weather forecast was cold and windy.

“My wife, Carol, and I saw that post and God touched both of us and at that point we said that just couldn’t happen,” Carl Jackson Jr. said.

Jackson, a member of Crittenden Baptist Church for the last six years, got to work.

He knew he’d found a purpose for the church’s new 12,000 square foot addition that could serve as a warehouse for donations.

DONATION NEEDS CHANGE:

The temporary tornado relief center at Crittenden Baptist Church is now in need of furniture, bath towels, wash cloths, sheet sets and fabric softener.

The center will accept items through March 17. For more information, call 428-3122.

Town hall meeting focuses on college, career readiness

‘BREAKING NEW GROUND - THE PATH TO COLLEGE AND CAREER READINESS’

- March 27
- 7 p.m.
- Grant Co. High School

Students, parents, faculty and the public are invited .

By Bryan Marshall
Staff Writer

By 2018, 54 percent of all jobs in Kentucky will require post-secondary training beyond high school.

However, Kentucky currently ranks 48th in the percentage of post-secondary education degree projections for 2018.

By 2020, 123 million American jobs will be in high-skill / high-pay occupations, from computer programming to bio-engineering, but only 50 million Americans will be qualified to fill them.

Grant County Schools and schools across the state are hoping the solution is making students college and career ready by the time they graduate.

The Grant County School District will host its first town hall meeting, “Breaking New Ground – The Path to College and Career Readiness,” at 7 p.m. March 27 at the Grant County High School auditorium.

Tours of the new career and technology center will be provided from 6 to 7 p.m. before the meeting.

“The education of our youth is critically important to not only our students, but also to the community at large,” said Superintendent Ron Livingood. “A town hall meeting is an excellent forum to generate the increased and necessary awareness among all stakeholders relevant to this most important issue.”

Attendees will learn about how the college and career readiness initiatives affect Grant County Schools and its students, along with insights by Livingood and several students.

FEDERAL

Because contiguous counties, such as Pendleton and Kenton, were approved, FEMA would have still provided financial assistance even if Grant would not have been declared a disaster area.

Willoby conducted an initial damage assessment the night the tornado hit and into next day.

Two days after the storm, a complete damage assessment was conducted that included going to each house and determining individual damages.

The reports were then sent to state emergency management on the road to being eligible for federal assistance.

Residents and business owners who sustained losses can begin applying for assistance by registering online at www.DisasterAssistance.gov or by calling 1-800-621-FEMA (3362) or 1-800-462-7585 for the hearing and speech impaired.

The toll-free telephone numbers will operate from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. seven days a week until further notice.

“I would hope everybody in the county who had any damage would apply for aid,” Willoby said. “It is tax dollars and you are entitled to get some of that back or at least apply for it. Especially if someone didn’t have insurance, I would definitely apply. The FEMA rep is recommending, even if you have insurance, to

FEMA

You or someone who is 18 or older and lived in the household prior to the disaster must be present for the scheduled appointment.

The inspector will ask for identification and proof of ownership and occupancy (for homeowners) and occupancy only (for renters). You can speed up the process by having the appropriate documents on hand:

- * A photo ID to prove identity, such as driver’s license or passport.
- * Proof of occupancy, which may include any one of the following:
  - * A lease, rent payment receipt, utility bill or other document confirming the home was the primary residence at the time of the disaster.
  - * An employee pay stub and similar documents addressed to the applicant and showing the address of the damaged home.
- * Proof of ownership, which may include any one of the following: Deed showing applicant as the legal owner; title that lists applicant on actual escrow or title document for the purchase of the home; mortgage payment book that names the applicant along with the address of the damaged home; property insurance policy for the damaged home with applicant’s name listed as the insured; tax receipts or a property tax bill that lists the address of the damaged home and the applicant as the responsible party to the assessments.

• After the Inspector’s Visit: You will receive a joint letter from FEMA and the commonwealth containing a decision within 10 days of the inspector’s visit. You may receive a low-interest disaster loan application in the packet from the U.S. Small Business Administration. You do not have to accept a loan. However, completing an SBA application opens the door to other possible forms of assistance.

If you are eligible for assistance, the letter will be followed by a check or an electronic funds transfer. The letter explains how the money can be used.

More disaster specific information can be found on the KYEM website at www.kyem.ky.gov.

get your name on the list because there may be something your private insurance may not cover.”

Kentucky Emergency Management urges survivors with storm damage to their residence or other property to document the damage by photographing or video taping it, if possible, and maintain a list of any repairs and keep repair receipts.

Residents also should report the damage and location to the county emergency manager, however, they must still register with FEMA to be considered for federal disaster assistance.

People who need to replace property deeds should visit the tax office Property Valuation Administrator to obtain documentation of ownership to prevent long delays in receiving eligible FEMA funds.

For public assistance, a separate report has to be filled out showing what expenses government agencies and other organizations have used in relief and clean up efforts, said Willoby.

Grant County Emergency Management will likely be the applicant for the entire county for public assistance, he said.

FEMA can re-pay police agencies, fire departments and other county agencies for overtime, which helps local government.

It will be months before county officials will know how much federal aid was given to Grant residents and agencies.

Crittenden-Mt. Zion Elementary hosted a “Tornado Relief Information Night” on March 9 for residents impacted by the devastating storm.

Organizations, including FEMA, American Red Cross and the Salvation Army, provided information to victims about ways to receive assistance as they pick up the pieces from the storm damage.

With about 50 families in attendance, Willoby said he was pleased with the turn out.

“I know the FEMA rep was very impressed,” he said. “He said he doesn’t see this happen in very many communities.”

The new focus has affected all aspects of instruction – from kindergarten through 12th grade – and includes changes in curriculum, learning targets, grading, assessment, accountability and more.

“While we are very proud of the opportunities offered to high school students at the new Grant County Schools Career and Technology Center, our focus on college and career readiness begins at the earliest opportunity,” Livingood said. “The most basic way is to ensure students in elementary schools are at grade level in numeracy and literacy skills. As students progress, our focus expands to include skills such as effective written and oral communication, collaboration and leadership, critical thinking and problem solving, agility and adaptability, initiative and entrepreneurialism – all skills identified by employers and universities as being critically important for success.”

The district also is trying to expose students to experiences beyond the classroom, including career fairs and advising, college visits for all juniors and the pursuit of business partnerships and dual credit opportunities that encourage a seamless transition from high school to college and careers, said Livingood.

The town hall meeting is targeted toward everyone from parents, staff and students to business leaders and community members.

“When you think about it, absolutely everyone in a community is impacted by the quality of its schools,” Livingood said. “Whether it’s the quality of care you receive at the doctor’s office or value of property in a given community, everything is dependent upon the quality of education possessed by the citizenry. For that reason, everyone needs to be informed and knowledgeable of the goals and challenges relative to educating the youth.”

PERSONALLY SPEAKING

Truly touched....

As I took cover like most people on that fateful Friday when the devastating tornado ripped through Grant County, I couldn't help but wonder about all the people I cared about. Were they alright? Did they have any damage done to their homes? I also couldn't help but wonder if there was anything I could do to help. As a former volunteer firefighter with EMT training, I knew I could be of help. On Saturday, March 3 I went to the Crittenden Fire House to see what I could do. I was amazed and truly touched by what I saw and the longer I stayed the more people came from all over to help. People who had lost loved ones in the deadly tornado, had damage to their homes or people who had just heard about what was going on showed up. The piles of water that looked like a sea of blue or the amount of food that people had brought in for volunteers was overwhelming. The Crittenden Fire House had asked the Crittenden Christian Church to open their doors for clothing donations and how people brought clothes. Piles and piles of baby clothes, dress clothes, coats and shirts. It saddened me that people had lost their homes and had structural damage to their homes but there is something comforting about knowing the community will always be there when a major disaster hits. The amount of people that had come up to me and asked "what can we do?" was amazing. It didn't hit me personally how bad things were until I had to go to Florence and took U.S. 25. I was totally and utterly speechless and that doesn't happen that often. A persons house that I had stopped at when they were having a yard sale, was gone with no trace left behind. I had never seen total destruction at the hands of Mother Nature like that before. My heart goes out to the families who lost loved ones and to the ones who had damage done to their homes. In the blink of an eye, you're world can change. I can't imagine how overwhelming it must be to try to find pieces of your home in the rubble and to say I understand would be an understatement but I know that your not alone. We, as a community, will always "step-up to the plate" to help our neighbors.

So to all of Grant County, this experience was truly humbling and I was truly touched at how our community came together in a time of crisis. I was truly honored to be a part of helping those in need. There is no other place I would rather be than in Grant County, knowing that in a time of need we all have the desire and the heart to catch each other when we stumble and when we fall.

With regrets, you can rot in Denmark

“With regrets, you can rot in Denmark.

That's what she gets for breaking my heart.” Those are my only two replies to the numerous emails I have received about the desperate situations some of you have found yourself in over the past few months.

It seems while traveling some of our citizens lost their money and emailed me from their intelligent phones asking for assistance. I'll change the names to protect the proposed guilty. Bettia Haffiniferger was in my office Thursday afternoon and on Friday morning an email arrived from Bettia that she was stranded in a far away land. To some of you that could be Florence, Ky., but poor Bettia was in Brixton Hill, England.

I've been to England and I know that if you are in Brixton Hill and the sun goes down then you are probably mortally wounded and would be dead by the time any money from me arrived. It's sort of like if you called me at 3 a.m. from Over the Rhine. I usually think that the person also sent emails to others who probably like them better so I just ignore the requests. But this time some-thing inside me made me reply to Bettia with, “That's what you get for breaking my heart. Rot in Brixton Hill.”

I saw Bettia a few days later and apologized and was awesomely shocked that she didn't get my reply and that she was in Grant County the entire time. Sometimes I get another email from the troubled victim saying that they are not anywhere other than Bruce's Grocery in Mason and that the request for financial help was a hoax. To this I replay, “So sorry, Brixton Hill is a wonderful place to visit this time of year...before dark... try the smoked eel.”

I have noticed that these pleas for help come from many of us caught in a loop of emails sent out by those who pass on to us those “Things you have to see” attachments.

These emails usually begin with something like, “I don't normally do this but you have to see this.”

Some begin with, “You are not an American if you don't look (like) this.” Or, “You are not a Christian if you don't...” so on and so forth.

I delete them all. I delete everything that comes in that says, “This is the funniest thing ever.” And, “this is the most shocking thing ever,” as well as, “The most awesome” and any other description.

These emails can carry the mother louse of internet lice.

My advice is don't pass on anything that is more than first generation. That means if someone forwarded it on to you, don't pass it to someone else no matter how awesome or shocking it is. If you want to share then say, “You're not an American if you don't go to this web address,” and give the address.”

“Awesome” and “Shocking” and many other such words used to mean something. Now they are so overused like, “Funniest Ever,” that the words don't mean anything.

If you think you have seen awesome, shocking and funniest ever on the World Wide Web, then I'm guessing you text while you drive and haven't seen the awesome shocking funniest ever reactions of the people trying to avoid your drunk-like driving.

Excuse me now as I've got some emails to send out. Seems that if I can come up with $800 I can claim a package waiting for me in Spain that has been certified to contain something of great value. All I need to do is find some friends with money.

A WORD FROM OUR READERS...

Bus driver offers formal apology for crash

This is addressed to the children that were on Grant County School Bus #062 on Jan. 17, 2007. It is also addressed to your families, my own loved ones and everyone else whose life was touched by the morning's fateful accident.

As the five year anniversary passes, I can not let this go another day. I have always been advised not to contact the victims, but my own heart compels me to do so. There were so many victims affected by the accident, including my own daughters.

Therefore, I am writing this public formal apology and am trying to make amends. I am truly and sincerely sorry to everyone.

I am forever imprisoned by my own inability to forgive myself, but it is not mine that matters the most to me. Jesus is the only one who has the authority to forgive, yet I need yours now, as much as I need my next breath.

I regret how long it has taken me to express to you how sorry I am for the result of my actions. I know this letter does not change the course of our lives, but I hope this gives you some peace in knowing that I am truly remorseful. Again, to all who were (and are still) affected, I give you my humblest apologies. I wish you all the very best of life.

DOWN AND DIRTY

Spring weed control starts this week

I think I have finally figured out the perfect machine for controlling those pesky spring weeds...sheep. Well, I know it is not for everyone, but our pregnant herd of Katahdin ewes are let loose from their pasture in the afternoon to graze freely within the secure fencing of the entire property for a few hours. To my delight, they have completely rid the mulched area beneath over 20 crab apples of chickweed, mouse ear, henbit, cress and any other savory weed that it otherwise my nemesis this time of the year. While the help is appreciated, it won't be too long when it will be problematic to let them graze freely because they will start to eat my perennials, trees and shrubs they are close to lambing and their pastures are greening up so it will balance itself out.

Can't count on sheep?

So if you don't have a flock, what are you to do to control the onslaught of germinating weeds? Controlling certain weeds takes some strategic planning, especially if you prefer to use as little chemical input as possible. For everyone's sake this should be the focus:human, pet, livestock, nature, water ways, etc. need to be protected. I have chickens that forage all over the place year round so there is no chance of using anything other than a well-timed strategy of hand-weeding, mulching, corn gluten and a little flame throwing, I'll explain.

You have probably already noticed some cool season weeds like henbit, chickweed and wild onion. Perennial performers like violets, dandelions and creeping Charlie are not far behind. Annual weeds spread by seed so if we address the young seedlings now, especially before they bloom, with a hoe or scratching tool in hand we have eliminated one generation. If the weed is a perennial like violets or wild onion then a bit more effort may be required. Every spring when the ground is moist I take my spade to the garden and pop out onions and violets from the mixed perennial beds. In a matter of about three years total I have eliminated some major weed problems by pulling, cultivating, mulching and using corn gluten preemergents.

Next step

Once your weeds are under control follow up with smart cultural practices like maintaining a taller stand of turf, use two inches of mulch in beds and tree rings; and hoe or hand weed as soon as you notice something. You can also use corn gluten based products as a granular preemergent to prevent weed seed from germinating. For this product to work effectively you must follow up with an application about every 10 weeks. Corn gluten is perfectly safe and provides a small amount of nitrogen to the garden as well. Don't use it where you are starting plants from seed, however.

Enter the 'Dragon'

We also employ a flame weeder that I will use on annual weeds like henbit that can carpet some areas in the vegetable garden in spring. The "Dragon" effectively cooks young tender weed seedlings but getting to them early is key. Organic herbicides that prove effective for spot treating weeds includes those with clove and citrus oils as the active ingredient; a full strength vinegar spray will wither a weed, too, but you need to come back to it several times to starve the roots.

If you are battling tough weeds like creeping Charlie you may be required to use a chemical to begin with; but if you properly use the product you should be able to follow up with hand weeding and cultural practices for long-term management. One treatment of a product that contains the active ingredienttwo, 4-D, dicamba and trichlopyris effective on the most difficult weeds. I would like to emphasize, however, that you want to follow label instructions exactly.

Clearly there is no magic bullet for weed control but we can take some common sense measures to devise an overall management plan. We have come to rely too heavily on the use of herbicides to fix our problems when we already have all the free tools we need: memory, reason and nimble fingers.

Easter: Celebration of life

Easter is one of the best times of the year. Spring is just around the corner. You can buy “Peeps” at the store and there are always eggs to color. There is something about this holiday that propels us into good spirits. Maybe it’s the warm weather, baseball season beginning (Go Reds) or the hope of summer coming.

I believe there is a bigger reason for the hope that spring brings to us. This hope is found is something much more profound. The hope of Easter comes in the reality of why we celebrate with so much anticipation.

Easter is a celebration of life. It is a celebration of the hope of eternal life. Easter is a celebration of God’s power over creation and his power over life and death. Easter is a celebration of the Resurrection of Jesus Christ. The importance of his resurrection cannot be overstated.

Pastor’s Corner

Darrell
MORGAN

Jesus Christ, the son of God, died on a cross for our sin. Without his death we have no hope of forgiveness, no hope of peace, no hope of eternal life. However, the story does not stop there. If Jesus would have just simply died, we would not have that hope. Jesus on the third day rose from the dead. His resurrection showed his power over death and the grave.

The hope of life comes in Jesus’ death and resurrection. Easter is our chance to celebrate our life now in Christ and in eternity. Jesus said in John 11 that his is the “Resurrection and Life,” that is what makes this holiday so powerful.

See you in church.

Attention, All Grant Countians!

Save the Date -- March 27, 2012

Did you know?

By the year 2020, 123 million American jobs will be in high-skill/high-pay occupations, from computer programming to bioengineering, but only 50 million Americans will be qualified to fill them.*

By 2018, 54% of all jobs in Kentucky (1.1 million jobs) will require postsecondary training beyond high school. The national average is 63%. Kentucky ranks 48th in postsecondary education degree projections for 2018. Without a better educated workforce, the Commonwealth will not attract the high-tech jobs of the future, and the state's economy will suffer.*

"What many students do not have is college expectations, meaningful college exposure, sufficient academic rigor in their K-12 classes, and the habits of mind required for college success. ... All educational reform programs that seek to improve college readiness and success are grounded in the belief that larger numbers of students can succeed in college, given appropriate preparation, motivation, and support."*

From a report established by Governor Steven L. Beshear and entitled "Breaking New Ground: Final Report of the Governor's Task Force on Transforming Education in Kentucky" 2011.

On March 27, 2012, Grant County Schools will host its first Town Hall Meeting.

Indiana resident captures Crittenden tornado on video

By Bryan Marshall
Staff Writer

While many in Crittenden were bracing for the destructive damage of a F3 tornado that touched down March 2, some were driving right into its path.

Matthew Pickett, a 26-year-old Greenfield, Ind., resident, was traveling with a friend southbound on Interstate 75 when they ran into the terrifying twister.

After a meeting in Cincinnati, Pickett said they were headed toward Lexington to see if the storm had caused havoc at his friend's house.

The friends had heard the reports of tornadic activity, but little did they know they would soon be face to face with the ultimate cause of four deaths in the Crittenden/Piner area.

They stopped briefly at the Walton exit, but decided to get back on the Interstate heading south, believing they were going away from the storm.

"I started freaking out," Pickett said. "At the Walton exit, the sky was green and hail was coming down. Then the radio said the tornado was headed toward the exit we were at, possibly north of our exit so we took off south again after a five-minute wait. And, then it showed up almost at the next exit." About a mile from the Crittenden exit in Grant County, the friends pulled their vehicle into the emergency lane as the sky darkened and the clouds above appeared deadly. "When I saw it crossing the highway and seeing how big it was and how close we were in relation to it, I was sure we were going to be picked up," Pickett said. "I could see the debris going up in the tornado, trees are breaking and going into the road in front of us, the high voltage power lines went shortly after it went east of us." Having to make a quick decision, Pickett and his friend decided to stay in the car as the tornado passed. "I know staying in the vehicle is not recommended, but there was so much debris flying around, then the cars driving past us and pulling over made for going for a ditch about as bad an idea," he said. Once they were sure the worst of the storm had passed, they pulled back on the Interstate toward Lexington. Before the Crittenden exit, they saw an overturned semi and helped the driver get out of the truck before returning on their original path.

While the near-death experience will be something Pickett will likely never forget, he has a tangible reminder of what he went through as well. He videotaped more than 90 seconds of tornado footage as the friends headed toward Crittenden and pulled off on the side of the road. The video serves as an up-close version of the powerful tornado that thrashed its way through Crittenden and southern Kenton

County. Ironically, Pickett used to chase tornadoes in Indiana in hopes of capturing one on camera. This time, the tornado was chasing him. "We were trying to get away from them, but the more south we went the more the tornadoes went south," he said. Pickett posted the brief footage on his Facebook page. It did not take long before others were sharing the harrowing footage on the popular social networking site. Kevin McDaniel, who is a cousin of Grant County coroner Bob McDaniel, uploaded the video to YouTube, where it has been seen by nearly 10,000 people, as of March 8. "That footage for me helps show others what this town went through, what they saw and what they endured," Pickett said. "I only got the beginning of a truly catastrophic event. For Crittenden, what they lost, people they won't be able to see again, places demolished and memories lost, that is the sad part of this video. Knowing that all that happened. My heart goes out to the people in Crittenden and I hope that they can recover from this soon." Pickett's video can be seen on YouTube at www.youtube.com/watch?v=emdgi7R5mfA.

CRITTENDEN

Jackson contacted Terry Conrad, Grant County Building Inspector, for a temporary permit to use the building. The new structure didn't even have electric, but that didn't deter him. Jackson began making phone calls and an army of volunteers started manning the relief center. There are carpenters, builders, teachers, nurses, retirees and self-employed. They are Baptists, Christians, non-church goers and from all over the tri-state area. Jackson said initially they planned to collect food items because the church already operated a food pantry. The hallways of the new building quickly filled with donated cases of bottled water and non-perishable food and then came the clothes. More clothes kept coming. So many in fact, the Crittenden Baptist Church Relief Center, has asked for no more clothing donations at this time. Currently, they are only accepting furniture, towels, bedding and fabric softener. "The hallways were lined with tables that were full and more stuff kept coming in," Jackson said. "I don't know how long we were here sorting items." On March 5, it was obvious more volunteers were needed and there were plenty of willing participants. "There was no organization to the things we were getting in so we re-arranged," he said. "It's constantly changing but every day it gets a little more fine tuned and organized." Volunteers have boxed excess clothing and are labeling the boxes. If area residents don't need the donations, Jackson said they'll eventually be sent to other disaster areas, but as long as there is a need locally, the donations and shelter will continue to stay open. The hours have been reduced daily from 3 to 8 p.m. as opposed to 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. right after the tornado. "We'll make sure whatever we have left will go to the next place that needs it," Jackson said. Jackson and Russ Harney, who is also coordinating relief efforts, are amazed by the outpouring from the community. "People have been saying, 'what can I do,'" Harney, a member of Crittenden Baptist Church, said. Harney developed a 'needs' wall and a 'haves' wall. "There are people who may need a coffee-maker but don't have a kitchen counter to put it on, but they'll need it later too, so we're connecting the dots and matching people with a need with people who have offered something," Harney said. The needs at the center changed daily, sometimes hourly. As of Tuesday, March 13, Jackson said donations would be accepted through March 17. The relief center at Crittenden Baptist Church could close by the middle of next week. "After that people can call the church and we'll try and meet their needs as quickly as possible," Jackson said. Right after the tornado, as many as 200 would turn out for a meal, which was being offered three times a day. The kitchen part of the relief center is no longer serving meals. Members of Crittenden Baptist were cooking at the church and were assisted by groups such as the Grant County Cattlemen's Association who brought a large grill to the church and fixed dinner and lunch a couple of times. Other churches, businesses and volunteers worked on the kitchen detail. The church also served as a location for other agencies to set up shop so that tornado victims only had one place to go. The Grant County Chapter of American Red Cross was there assisting families in the days following the tornado. These men are thankful they had the space sitting and waiting to be used. "Who could have ever dreamed this would have happened and that we'd be able to use it for this purpose," Jackson said. But credit doesn't go to a handful or even one congregation for the massive effort at the church. Harney, Jackson and J.B. Curd agree on that. "I can't even tell you how many volunteers there have been," Jackson said. "We tried to keep up with it and even started a sign in sheet, but it was just impossible." The outreach project has been a learning process too. "This has truly been amazing," Jackson said. "We've seen God's hands in this all the way. None of us have been trained for this and we're doing the best we can with what we have and that's all we can do." "It was crystal clear that this was God's calling," Harney said. "It's been amazing how God can come in and make things happen. It's been incredible to be a part of this." See next week's Grant County News for continued coverage, as well as more on recovery efforts and local volunteers.

Is this you?

I was involved in a motorcycle crash and lost my leg Aug. 19, 2010 on Hwy. 22, Williamstown to Falmouth, right across from the Williamstown Cemetery. A nurse came there to help me as I lay on the ground. I can remember her, but cannot remember her name. I desperately wish to thank her for her help that day, because the doctors have told me that she saved my life. I do remember that she was an employee of the University of Cincinnati, but I cannot find her or located her name. She also came to visit me in the emergency room at the hospital. If anyone knows this person or if my life saving good Samaritan reads this ad, please call me at my home number (859) 814-7962 or call my aunt Brenda Colson at (859) 428-9842 after 5 p.m.

Volunteers step up to help with relief efforts

By Jamie Baker-Nantz
Editor

Carl Jackson Jr. and Bryan Slaughter are like many local builders – happy to find work in a sluggish economy, but the Grant County residents have found a work that is keeping them extremely busy.

The job is a freebie, but the reward is beyond measure.

Jackson and Slaughter are just two individuals from hundreds who've spent the last two weeks spending their days volunteering at Crittenden Baptist Church, which has become the relief center for the March 2 tornado victims.

Jackson, as part of the Crittenden Baptist Men's Group was out early Saturday following the tornado picking up debris and downed trees.

Seven men spent time in the Harvesters Subdivision and then on Bingham Lane. They helped fellow church members at Crittenden Baptist and non-church members alike.

The group was one of many that turned out on Saturday and in the days following the tornado to help victims still reeling from the shock.

"This is where I belong," Jackson said, of his reason for being there.

He's not alone.

Slaughter, who has grown up in Grant County and is a member of Crittenden Baptist Church and the men's group there, has been out of work for weeks.

"It's been about four weeks since I've had a paycheck," Slaughter said. "But, I got blessed just from being there."

Slaughter said it all started when they accepted the first box of donations.

"It just took off from there," he said. "It's brought out the best of everyone. Everyone has chipped in and we did it because it was the right thing to do."

J.B. Curd, also a member at Crittenden Baptist, who is retired volunteered in the kitchen.

"It's amazing how smooth things have gone," Curd said. "I've probably cried a thousand times and I've had my heart broken probably a hundred times but I've been blessed beyond belief."

Donations came from everywhere, including Domata Peko, a Bengals player who dropped off canned goods and meat to the church.

Lanette Whalen, of Williamstown, spent last week working at the church.

Her motivation was to honor her friend, Courtney Stephenson, who died when her car was blown off Interstate-75 near the Crittenden exit.

Stephenson, the mother of two children who attended Williamstown schools, was battling cancer.

"What a fight you waged. I'll miss your beautiful smile and your heart of gold. You were and are an inspiration. Rest now, my friend," Whalen wrote on her Facebook page.

Whalen said she met Stephenson when she taught parenting classes for Grant and Pendleton counties through the Family Nurturing Center.

"We became friends there. Her death is a sad blessing because of her struggle with cancer," Whalen said.

Stephenson was returning from a doctor's appointment in Indiana about her cancer treatments at the time of the accident.

"She would have been right here working and helping," Whalen said. "She smiled no matter what, even when her hair fell out and she was as bald as she could be. For her, life was about building memories."

The Grant County Chapter of the American Red Cross has also been busy these last few days.

Local volunteers, Sherry Hall and Nancy Owens, were at the church, assisting families with food, clothing, bedding and financial assistance. They also brought in a mental health nurse and a registered nurse to help families in coping with the trauma.

"Some people don't understand our function," Hall said. "We're here to meet a families' immediate need of food, shelter and clothing. Once those necessities are met, we refer people to other agencies who can offer additional help."

Owens has been a Red Cross volunteer for five years. As she sat inside the emergency shelter at Grant County High School, which opened right after the tornado, she cried.

"It's been emotional," she said. "We went to do an assessment and couldn't find the house because it wasn't there any more."

Hall, an eight-year-volunteer, said she was proud of the group's efforts in getting the shelter open quickly and prepared for 100 families.

"We've never had a situation like this, so I think we did a good job in getting things up and running so quickly," Hall said.

The Red Cross stayed at the church through March 13. Anyone needing assistance from the Red Cross should call 859-630-3460.

"I've been so proud of our community. It's given me hope that Grant County still cares," Hall said.

GCHS Braves Baseball

Braves seeks new ace of the pitching staff

By Matt Birkholtz
Sports Writer

With Aaron Goe graduated and pitching at Morehead State and losing four other seniors, Braves coach Darrick Lee is looking at a rebuilding year on the mound and at two other key positions

Even with only getting 20 games in the spring with the dampen weather, Goe led the team on the mound to a regional appearance last season.

“We are still looking for people to take over first base and catcher, but I think collectively we will be fine,” Lee said. “We still got a lot of work to do to get ourselves better.”

Lee, a coach for five years, said Ben Shipp will get a lot of time on the mound.

Behind the plate, Lee has three catchers trying out for the starting job, including transfer Lucas Alger, who came over from Williamstown last school year.

With the team that is coming back for the Braves, Lee is looking to the team to provide leadership on the field.

Some key players returning this season include Shipp, Jordan Martin and Blake Dills.

The first game of the season is against Henry County, which the Braves lost to in the regional tournament.

Goe, who was hit in the face while standing on the on-deck circle, left the game to get stitches. Lee, while not making excuses wonders what might have been.

“We could have probably won the game if he hadn’t gotten hit,” Lee said.

The Braves then face county-rival Williamstown on March 20. After playing Carroll County on March 21, the Braves will embark on a two-week road trip and won’t return for a home game until Bishop Brossart on April 7.

A key series of two district games will happen April 23 and April 25, when the Braves will host Walton-Verona and Simon Kenton.

Last season, the Braves lost to the Pioneers 2-0 in the 32nd District Championship game.

Lee is hoping the season isn’t shortened due to spring rain.

tunities to score, but we didn’t have the compsure to get the runs in mentally. If we ever get there, we should be able to compete more and maybe win more games.”

Some key losses from last season’s team was pitcher and outfielder Kevin McCullough.

“He threw a lot of innings last year,” Mason said. “I am hopefully going to get some innings from three or four pitchers this season.”

Mason will look to senior Issac

Alger to lead the pitching staff, that may consist of almost anybody on the team.

“He’ll set the tone for the season,” Mason said.

Mason said senior Lee Boone is coming back from a shoulder injury and will be their primary catcher.

A player that is on the rise for the Demons is junior Zach Rose. Mason said Rose has stepped up since last year and will see an increase in playing time from last season.

The Demons open up the season on the road against Grant County March 20. The bulk of their home schedule is in the middle of the season from April 21 through April 27. The Demons will have five games in that one-week stretch.

“Our goal is to win one district game, so we can show them that we can be there with them,” Mason said about playing the teams in the 32nd District tournament.

Lady Braves rebuild after loss of Biddle, Roy

By Matt Birkholtz
Sports Writer

Lady Braves coach Ott Reed expects senior Morgan McClure and junior Sierra Sydnor to pitch plenty of innings for the softball team this season.

With the loss of Katelyn Roy, who pitched nearly every inning of every game last season and is currently playing for Northern Kentucky University, Reed had to create a new rotation for Grant County.

The rotation for this season only has 30 varsity innings pitched.

“We are going to have inexperienced pitching, so we are obviously going to struggle at pitching early on,” Reed said. “I’ve told the girls to be strong on defense and to improve their hitting.”

Reed said the team is going to have to be focused from the first pitch.

“You can’t wait for the other team to be aggressive,” Reed said. “You have to be the one attacking.”

The Lady Braves were 26-12

last season and was the regional runner-up, losing to Collins 6-4.

The Lady Braves also lost their catcher, Taryn Biddle, who now catches for Asbury University.

Reed said that Sydnor will catch games when she isn’t pitching. Eighth grader Victoria Clark will catch some games too.

Around the bases you will see junior Mariah Smith playing at third. Senior Erica Stith will be starting at shortstop.

Stith is considered by Reed to be one of the best, if not the best shortstop in the 8th Region.

“She is just that steady and you can see an improvement in her hitting this spring,” Reed said.

At second base will be Taylor Souder, and at first base will be Kayla Cummins.

In the outfield will be junior Samantha Perry in left field, McClure in center field and newcomer, junior Gwen MacAdams.

“Gwen has never played softball before,” Reed said. “She has caught onto the game quicker than anyone I have ever seen. She isn’t polished, but by the end of the year, she should be adept to the team.”

Looking at the 32nd District, Reed sees the competition being between Simon Kenton, Walton-Verona and Grant County.

“Simon Kenton is going to be tough,” Reed said. “Walton-Verona, until someone beats them, they are going to be top team not only in the district, but in the region. They have five seniors and are battle tested. We have always played them tough and they play us tough. Without seeing Williamstown, I would have to say it is a three-team race.”

As for the schedule, Reed said it isn’t as hard as last season, but should make the girls competitive by the time the district tournament starts on May 21 at Simon Kenton High School.

“Last year, we had eight games against the top 25 teams and went 2-6,” Reed said. “With this team, I scheduled games that we would be competitive against.”

Grant County will play Williamstown on March 27 and April 9.

The Lady Braves have four tournaments on their schedule. They will head to Madison Central for a one-day, round-robin tournament March 24. After that, Grant County will play in the Uncle Pete Knoll Classic at Softball City in Taylor Mill, March 30 and 31. On April 20 and 21, the Lady Braves will play in the Lady Colonel 1st Priority/Unite Classic at Whitley County. Their final regular season tournament will be April 27 and 28 at the 5th Annual Harrison County McDonalds Classic.

New coach brings new light to Lady Demons

By Matt Birkholtz
Sports Writer

Williamstown will be moving into a new direction with new coach Melissa Gayheart, who takes over the program after T.J. West became the athletic director for the high school.

Gayheart, who has playing experience in softball at Scott County High School, Northern Kentucky University, and Midway College, gets her first try at being a high school softball coach.

The key area that Gayheart wants to work on with the Lady Demons is fundamentals.

“I want them to do their all and develop their skills,” Gayheart said. “I want to focus on speed with dragging and bunting at the plate. I hope from all we are going to lose this season, the younger girls will step up.”

Williamstown replaces seniors

Shelly Cason, Ali Rich, Kayla Schultz and Tori Wilhoit, Gayheart is going to have to rely on nine seniors for leadership, including Emma Harris and Lisa Garant.

“I am going to look to Olivia DeZarn and Emmalie Hankinson to provide a spark for this team,” Gayheart said.

Last season the Lady Demons were 13-17 overall and 0-7 in the 32nd District. Williamstown lost to Grant County 13-0 in the first round of the district tournament.

Looking at their schedule, Williamstown has three tournaments to play, including the 8th Region All “A” Classic April 13. They will also play in two North Central Kentucky Conference tournaments, the first one on April 25 against Owen County and the other one to be determined on May 2.

Other key matchups for Williamstown include playing Grant County on March 27 and again on April 9. They will face Walton-Verona on April 3 and April 17. The Lady Demons will also play Simon Kenton on April 12 and April 23.

Gayheart is going to rely on the pitching of Harris, who is their top returning pitcher from last season.

“She is going to be my star,” Gayheart said. “It’s going to be all on her.”

Seventh grader Jade Pinkston will also provide pitching along with Kaitlyn Kinman.

“Those three are going to be key to how well we are pitching,” Gayheart said.

Even with nine seniors on the roster, Gayheart will have some new additions taking over spots that were lost by last year’s seniors.

Hankinson will be replacing Wilhoit at shortstop and senior Mikayla Sherman play first base.

With season starting March 15 against Frankfort, Gayheart is anxious to get started and get comfortable with the team.

“I am so excited,” Gayheart said. “These girls all love the game and I can’t wait for our first game.”

Braves tennis looks to improve in second season

By Matt Birkholtz
Sports Writer

It was a learning process for the Grant County tennis program as it completed its first year of existence with an appearance at the regional meet.

Second-year coach Corbin Brown has six returning athletes from last year's team, including seniors Sidney Tencza, Brian Perry and Justin Case.

Brown said the key additions to this year's team is everyone coming back from last year. He said they all worked over the offseason, getting lessons in preparation for this season.

Even though the roster is small, Brown likes to have separate practice days for the boys and the girls, so they can get more one-on-one time with him to improve on their skills.

Even though the team doesn't have a home tennis court match this season, you can catch them at Webb Park, when they will face Williamstown.

The girls team that will face Williamstown on March 28 and April 18. The closest boys match will be March 15 and April 30, when they will head to Walton-Verona to take on the Bearcats.

Brown hopes to eventually gain more numbers of tennis players and also a home court, but for the time being, they will be a traveling team for this season and for the foreseeable future.

Results of their first match against Ryle were unavailable at press time, but can be found on www.grantky.com and will be in next week's Grant County News.

Program is beginning to grow in numbers

By Matt Birkholtz
Sports Writer

The Williamstown tennis program is beginning to see a growth in interest with the addition of four new tennis players to the 2012 roster.

The Lady Demons will miss their top two tennis players from a year ago in Brittany Elliott and Amanda Wilson who graduated.

Third-year coach Sean Binder is looking at a young team that has two sophomores, four freshman and four middle school girls on the team.

Binder said he is anxious to see how well freshman Sarah Hicks and eighth grader Savanna Moss have improved from a season ago.

For the second consecutive season, the Lady Demons will face Grant County in two matches, with the first one on March 28 and the second one on April 18.

With the small numbers that Grant County has, Binder said that it will be determined by Braves coach Corbin Brown how the matches will be set up against Williamstown.

"All they have to have is three matches for them to count," Binder said. "It is up to him if he wants to do two doubles and one single, or vice a versa."

Some other key matchups that the Lady Demons will be hosting at Webb Park are Gallatin County on April 9, Simon Kenton on April 20 and new to their schedule from last season is Calvary Christian, which they will play on May 3.

Regionals again will be hosted by Western Hills High School in Frankfort on the week of May 7-11.

Braves race the track with new coach

By Matt Birkholtz
Sports Writer

After a successful season in which the 4x800 meter relay team, and Nathan Davis qualified for state, the Grant County track and field team is in a rebuilding mode with a new coach.

Chris Jefferson, who was an assistant for Brian Soules, takes over for Soules who left for Boone County High School before the school year started.

“This is my first year being a head coach of a track team,” Jefferson said. “It hasn’t been a tough adjusment with the day-to-day activities of practice. It takes a little more work as far as getting the paperwork put together and organizing an event, but it has been a lot easier than I thought it was going to be.”

The Braves return only one runner from the 4x800 meter relay team in senior Tyler Edmondson.

Jefferson said he is going to place Danny Hess, Dillon Ingram and Jarred Baker to run along with Edmondson.

“Losing those three seniors is really going to hurt us,” Jefferson said. “If they were coming back, I would have no doubt that we could have won the regional event this year.”

“I think it is a psychological advantage for the athletes, because I feel I get them to work harder when we are on the track.”

- Chris Jefferson
Braves' track coach

The Braves lost Davis, who qualified for the high jump at state last season. He transfered to Ryle High School after last school year. They also lost Haylee Hudson, who transfered to Scott County and qualified for state at the middle school level last season.

Even with the losses, Jefferson said he has some key additions to this current team that can prove to be pivotal down the stretch.

“We have a lot of key people back and I really think some of younger track athletes are going to step it up big,” Jefferson said.

Jefferson said he is looking to junior Taylor Cummins to provide a spark after missing last season with an injury.

He also feels that Sabryn Wooton is going to be a star and with only being an eighth grader, there is a lot of raw potential there that can be molded during her high school career.

One of the meets that Jefferson is looking forward to the most is actually the first one on their schedule, for the Grant County-Pendleton County-Owen County-Walton-Verona Gold Medal Meet March 22 at Owen County High

Jefferson said it was a meet that Soules and the coaches from the other respective schools got together and formed last season, which Grant County hosted.

Grant County will be hosting three meets starting on April 17 and then April 27 and May 1 respectively.

Another meet that means a lot to Jefferson is going to be the Harrison County Invitational on April 28.

“I’m from that area and I am looking forward to competing against some people that I know and use to work with,” Jefferson said.

The regional meet on May 12 at Scott High School is the determinant of who qualifies for the state meet May 19 in Louisville.

Jefferson said the 4x800 relay has the best shot of heading back to the state meet, but he also has an eye on a few others that could qualify.

“Cierra Fannon if she can get here, work hard on getting into shape and on the hurdles, she has a good shot of getting to state,” Jefferson said.

Jefferson said other than that he will have to see how everyone does with their running, but he would like to see how Cummins does with her experience of getting to state on a relay team a couple of seasons ago.

With the spoardic weather, the Braves have been able to get more days on the track than what a normal winter usually is. Jefferson said.

“We have been fortunate to have this kind of weather,” Jefferson said.

The team was able to pratcice a few days in December and January.

Jefferson said with the opportunity to work outside on specific events like the sprints, it has given them an advantage over years past.

Demons set pace for success

By Matt Birkholtz
Sports Writer

The Williamstown High School track and field team is poised for another season, after reaching the state championship in Louisville last season.

Returning from that team are seniors Sean Moreland and Blake Edmondson.

Demons track coach Michelle Whaley expects some new athletes adjusted to track and field and what events they will be best at.

"I have some new girls that have joined the team and I have high expectations for them," Whaley said. "I forsee many new athletes going to state."

On the boy's side, junior Quade

Simpson has joined the track team and will be throwing shot put.

"His talent is unbelievable for just starting," Whaley said.

Whaley, who is also the cross country coach at Williamstown, said there is a big differences between coaching each sport.

"The training is the most difficult part of coaching track," Whaley said. "With cross country, the runners practice at the same time and we run the same practices. We are like a big family running together. With track, I need to come up with short distance, middle and long distance practices and workouts and have the team captains run the different practices. It is impossible for me to monitor three or four different practices and workouts."

An obstacle that the Williamstown track and field team has every season is not having a facility to practice on.

Whaley said the team has purchased starting blocks to help with the short distance events, but there is no long jump pit or shot and discus areas to practice on.

"The team has adapted well with not having a track or the equipment," Whaley said.

Whaley said she is looking to Edmondson, Moreland, Simpson and Easton McClanahan to have strong seasons.

"McClanahan has been showing lots of potential at practices and I am excited to see how he performs," Whaley said.

Some key track meets on the schedule are the Walton Bearcat Open on March 24. The following week they will participate in the Walton Light the Night on March 31. This meet is the All "A" meet.

The Demons will also compete in all three meets hosted by Grant County High School. Those meets are on April 17, April 27 and May 1.

The regional meet is May 11 though May 12 and the state meet is May 18 through May 19 at the University of Louisville.

"The schedule is not difficult and athletes can try new events out with different meets," Whaley said. "Having a busy schedule of meets does benefit the track athletes."

At press time, there were no results for the Carroll County All-Comers No. 1 meet. Go to www.grantky.com for full results from the meet and check out next week's Grant County News for weekly results from all of the spring sports in Grant County.

Spring training is in full swing

Baseball is in full swing around the majors, with teams in the Grapefruit League and Cactus League.

The Cincinnati Reds played the Chicago Cubs on March 12 and lost 8-6. Pitcher Bronson Arroyo struggled, giving up six hits and four runs over two innings.

A key for Cincinnati's offense was rookie shortstop Zach Cozart, who is hitting .375 this spring. Todd Frazier is also swinging the bat well and could end up making the ballclub out of spring training. He hit his third home run of the spring.

Reds manager Dusty Baker told the media after the game that he hates losing to the Cubs. Baker managed the Cubs from 2003-2006.

It has been a dream of mine to go visit the Reds during spring training. What has become difficult is that they are now out in Arizona.

Baseball is by far my favorite sport and giving my two cents on how the season is going to be, is something I have wanted to add to my coverage here at the Grant County News.

I believe you can get the Reds information from anywhere, but why not from your local newspaper.

The Reds have made numerous acquisitions over the winter and you will be seeing new faces when you make a trip to Great American Ballpark.

One of the big acquisitions of the winter, was the Reds acquiring Mat Latos from the San Diego Padres for Edinson Volquez, Yonder Alonso, Yasmani Grandal and Brandon Boxberger.

You may think we gave up too many young prospects for one arm, but when you look at how the team struggled last season it was with their starting pitching being inconsistent.

Latos will be under team control for the next four seasons and he is only 24-years-old. I like the move.

Other offseason moves included acquiring Sean Marshall from the Cubs, signing free agents Ryan Madson and Ryan Ludwick to one-year deals.

I feel like a little child excited to get back to Great American Ballpark. My first trip to see the Reds will be on April 3 for the Reds Futures Showcase, which will pivot the Reds of Today with the Reds of Tomorrow.

This has to be one of the most exciting seasons I have been anticipating in my 26 years of life.

Following the Showcase, I will be attending the 93rd Findlay Market Opening Day Parade. After watching Aaron Boone, the grand marshal of the parade roam through the streets of downtown Cincinnati, I will head to the Holy Grail, a bar across the street from the ballpark and watch the game on television, since I wasn't able to get tickets this season.

My first regular season game will be on April 7 when the Reds take on the Miami Marlins. Latos will most likely be the starting pitcher that night and the festivities will also be in full gear.

The Reds will be appearing on the Fan Zone to meet and greet with fans, signing autographs. Last year, my fiance Jessica Purnell had to squeeze through people to reach some of the players to sign our baseball pennant, that hangs behind me in the Grant County News office.

I am ready for baseball. The smell of popcorn, peanuts and Cracker Jack, baseball fills my blood every February through October. Go Redlegs!

Wildcats head to 'Ville for March Madness

By Brian Melton
Contributing Writer

The University of Kentucky Wildcats received the #1 overall seed in the upcoming NCAA Tournament when the brackets were announced Sunday night. The Cats will open play in Louisville on Thursday night at 6:50 p.m. against the winner of the Mississippi Valley State and Western Kentucky opening round game that kicks off tournament action Tuesday night.

There is no shortage of possible storylines for UK as they begin the quest for their eighth National Championship and first since Tubby Smith's squad cut down the nets in 1998.

When you look at Kentucky's path back to the final four, it's hard not to like the locations for their tournament action. They start in Louisville for Second and Third round action, which will provide a home game atmosphere in their home state. If

STORYLINES FOR POSSIBLE MATCHUPS FOR KENTUCKY

- Kentucky's first opponent will be either in state rival Western Kentucky University or Mississippi Valley State who is coached by a member of the "Unforgettables" Sean Woods.
- The Wildcats have the possibility of meeting up with the last two National Champions in UConn and Duke.
- Indiana is the #4 seed in the South region and the Hoosiers are one of only two teams to defeat the Cats this season.
- And then there is the possibility of meeting Duke in the Regional Final on what would be the 20th anniversary of a shot by a former Blue Devil that I've seemed to have forgotten.

they advance, the South Regional will be at the Georgia Dome in Atlanta, a city with a huge alumni base. Then there's the possibility of a return trip to New Orleans for the Final Four where many Cat fans just spent a weekend for the SEC Tournament.

Of course when you talk about the NCAA tournament, it's all about how your team matches up with their opponents. For the most part Kentucky matches up well with the teams in their bracket.

Duke as the #2 seed and Baylor as the #3 seed seem like good matchups for the Cats compared to other teams on the same seed line. At #4 is Indiana, who provides plenty of motivation after their victory earlier this season.

In my opinion the most concerning possible matchup lies in the Third round game with either Connecticut or Iowa State. The Huskies are a physical basketball team who have underachieved all season with at least two future NBA players on the roster. Iowa State is a team who likes to shoot the three, can be deadly from outside the arc, and has a star in Royce White.

Anything can happen in March and most of the time it does. I think that Kentucky has a great chance of returning to the Final Four with their best chance during the John Calipari era of winning the National Championship. Will that happen? Big Blue Nation sure hopes so. Myself included.

Third time not the charm for UK

Sometimes the SEC Tournament bracket works out in your favor, see last year's path to the tournament title, and sometimes it doesn't. Last season, Kentucky avoided facing the stiffest and most familiar competition until the final day. This season, not so much. The Cats had the pleasure of playing the two best teams remaining in the tournament in consecutive days and for the third time this season. And clearly the third time was not the charm.

Kentucky opened the tournament with what turned out to be an absolute battle with the LSU Tigers, eventually winning 60-51. The Cats uncharacteristically struggled with careless turnovers, poor offensive execution, and a rather forgettable performance by point guard Marquis Teague. If not for impressive performances by the starting front court of Michael Kidd-Gilchrist, Terrence Jones, and Anthony Davis their time in Blue Orleans might have been short lived.

Next up for the Wildcats was a semifinal matchup with Florida for the third time in the last month. In the previous two UK victories, the Gators had struggled shooting the three, but it was evident from the opening tip that this wasn't going to be the case on this day, as they made five of their first nine attempts and 11 total for the game. Kentucky managed to make it more of a half-court game in the second half and was able to use their size advantage in the post. All five starters finished the game with double figures in scoring as the Cats held on for a 74-71 victory.

In order to claim their third straight SEC Tournament title, Kentucky would again have to defeat another conference foe for the third time this season. Unfortunately, Vanderbilt wasn't cooperative. The Commodores had played the Cats tough in both previous matchups and were more than they could handle on this day. It started with hot shooting from downtown and finished with a tremendous defensive performance down the stretch to claim only their second SEC Tournament Championship in the school's history with a 71-64 win.

Kentucky's inability to score a single basket in the game's final eight minutes and struggles shooting the basketball throughout the contest led to only their second loss on the season. They finished the game 6-28 from the three point line and 35.9 percent overall. Vanderbilt's decision to make the Cats beat them from the outside and switch to a zone in defense in crunch time worked out well on this day.

After the game Coach Calipari said he was surprised by the team's inability to make shots when it mattered most. "This team has responded. Today, for the first time in the last four minutes of the game we didn't make shots. I'll be honest with you, I was stunned and I mean they were wide open shots with no one near and we just missed. That happens. I'd rather it happen now than next weekend or the following weekend or the following weekend, do it now."

In the grand scheme of things, the loss means little. Kentucky still received the overall #1 seed in the South Region of the NCAA tournament and will begin their quest for their eighth National Championship in Louisville on tonight, March 15. The Madness of March is upon us and anything can happen. Will this be the year that Calipari and his young Cats win that elusive title? We'll all know the answer on April 2nd.
